Morality in the boardroom: lessons to be learned from the crisis

Friday, 15 May, Beurs van Berlage, Amsterdam

Leading business executives and entrepreneurs are confronted with the conflicting relationship between market practices and morality on a daily basis. We can learn a great deal from their experiences. How do European businesses distinguish themselves in the global economy? How is the European way of doing business affected by market deregulation, by an increased orientation towards shareholders, by globalisation, and by the current recession? Can members of the board still listen to their moral conscience?
